

The European Observatory on Femicide has the honour to invite you to the side event

Saving Women's Lives through Data Collection

Tuesday 15 May 2018, 2.20 - 3. 10 p.m. at Room M6

The side event, hosted by Malta, focuses on the role of the newly established European Observatory on Femicide EOF in supporting femicide prevention through the accessibility and visibility of quality and comparative data on gender-based killings of women throughout Europe. The aim of the side event is to introduce the EOF to an international audience, visualise its role in global, European and national contexts, and to answer the question of how the EOF plans to utilise data collection to support femicide prevention and social change.

Programme:

Welcome by the moderator and opening words from Her Excellency Marie Louise Coleiro Preca, the President of Malta, via video

Introduction by Dubravka Šimonović, UN Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women, its causes and consequences

Presentation of the European Observatory on Femicide by Marceline Naudi and Barbara Stelmaszek, University of Malta

Setting up a comparative European data collection system by Ksenia Meshkova, Humboldt University Berlin
